

Caswell-Marsh House, 889 Suncook Valley Highway, Epsom, NH

Research on this house was done earlier by George H. Yeaton. He relates the house being moved to its current location by George W. Lane of Chichester before 1878. There is no house at this location according to the 1858 map, and there is on the 1892 map, owned by George W. Marden. Tax records indicate that Aaron Marsh lived in the house when it was on Route 4 west of the traffic circle, and the caption for a picture of the house gives it a building date of 1842. Aaron Marsh's wife, Sara Ann Marden was a sister to later owner, George W. Marden who had the house moved. According to Harvey Batchelder, James M. Gordon, who married Carrie Marden, resided at this house 1876-1879, and appears here in Epsom in the 'Enrollment of the Town' for those years. He was a cabinet and organ maker, with one of his organs surviving and property of the Epsom Historical Association. George Dana Yeaton and his wife Charlotte owned the house about 1910, he being a Police Captain in Boston. For a time, his wife's father, George Taylor, a retired sea captain, he died in 1916, his daughter Charlotte died in 1917. The George D. Yeaton's also owned a farm on the corner of Dover Road and Route 107 heading to Deerfield.
